About Me

A little about who I am.

I'm an AI Engineer at Dynatech Systems, and I genuinely enjoy my work. Right now, my goal is to grow within the private sector and keep expanding my knowledge in AI.

Music and dance are a big part of who I am. I love to sing — slow songs are my favourite, though I can vibe to just about any kind — and I know plenty of Garba songs. Dancing comes naturally to me, and I especially love doing Garba.

I've been active since my school days — in sports, olympiads and art. I took part in running, hurdles, district-level Kho-Kho and chess, and I have a few olympiad medals too. Just for fun, I can also solve a Rubik's cube.

I'm someone who enjoys the simple things — I love almost every festival, I'm fond of winters (I finally get to wear full sleeves!), and I have a soft spot for warm brown shades.

When it comes to food, I have a sweet tooth — Oreo, strawberry and mango are my weakness — and I love dosa and South Indian food. I'm also a big fan of pyaaz kachori and namkeen snacks. My everyday comfort meal is simple: roti-sabji with aloo-pyaaz, paired with chaas or aamras. A strawberry or mango ice-cream always works too, though with cake I'm happy either way.

My Family

The people who made me who I am.

We're a family of four — my mom Deepa, my dad Pawan, my sister Bhoomika and me.

My dad is a CA (Inter) and currently works as the Commercial Head at Supernova Engineers Ltd. He's very health-conscious, loves his yoga, and likes to follow a routine.

My mom is a homemaker and the heart of our home. She did Home Science, loves to dance to energetic songs, enjoys her coffee, and takes great care of herself and our home — she's especially fond of looking after the plants around the house.

My sister Bhoomika was a state-level basketball player in school. She's now in her second year of BBA at GLS University and is also preparing for the CAT.

Our roots are in Rajasthan — my mom is from Bikaner and my dad from Churu — while I was born and brought up in Ahmedabad, where we have two homes, a car and two Activas.

Culture & Roots

Where I come from.

My roots are in Rajasthan — my family hails from Bikaner and Churu. We are Pipa Kshatriya (Darji), and there's a story behind the name: our ancestors were Kshatriyas, warriors who, after years of war, chose to lay down their swords and take up tailoring instead — peace over conflict. It's a part of my heritage I feel quietly proud of.

Faith has always been a steady presence in our home, and we hold Hanuman ji especially close. I usually visit the Hanuman temple every Tuesday, and a few years ago my dad and I would walk there together every Sunday — a small ritual I still cherish. Being Rajasthani, we also celebrate Gauri Pooja, which is a big festival for us.

Festivals are when our whole family comes together. We've welcomed Ganesh ji into our home before — there's a lovely tradition of committing to it for one, three or five years — and we're planning to bring him home again next year. On Rakshabandhan we head to my Bade Papa's place, and Diwali is a warm community get-together, usually followed by a family trip.

The values I've grown up with are simple but important to me — respect for elders, and a home where we share everything openly. By nature I'm easy-going; I don't get angry quickly, and I love making the people around me laugh.

Going forward, I believe in balance — staying rooted in our traditions and faith while keeping an open mind, without neglecting either. These are the things I'd love to carry into my own family one day, along with warm, friendly bonds with everyone around me.

Thank you for reading

Thank you for taking the time to get to know me, my family and our story. I've shared this with an open and sincere heart.

My hope is to build a loving, respectful future with Prarthna — and I would be grateful for your blessings.

With warmth,

Samir
